Location and Amenities:

Mentioned in the Domesday Book of Records, Lilley is a small village in Hertfordshire which stands between Hitchin (Hertfordshire) and Luton (Bedfordshire), on the highest ground and within some of the most striking scenery in the area. Telegraph Hill is just over 600 feet above sea level. The low-lying land to the south of Lilley is called Lilley Bottom. The low ridge to the east of the village is known as Lilley Hoo.

Cassell Memorial Hall hosts many events such as Parent and Toddler group, cinema club, yoga and pilates classes, table tennis, coffee mornings and the WI.

The parish church of St Peters' was rebuilt in the 19th century and contains some original features and a fine Elizabethan heraldic memorial. It is known as "The Walkers' Church" because many walkers enjoying the countryside walks hereabouts drop in to visit the church.

The Lilley Armes dates back to 1705 and was built as a coaching inn. It is now the only pub in the village and is a good place to stop when exploring the Ickneild Way or the Hertfordshire countryside.

The village is well served by good Hertfordshire primary and secondary schools and easy access is gained to all commuter routes, including the M1, A1(M) and public transport links.
