SITUATION

Choseley is a charming tiny rural hamlet conveniently situated between Docking to the south and Titchwell and Thornham to the north. Docking is a thriving community with good amenities including a primary school, village stores/Post Office, pub, fish and chip shop and a medical centre. Thornham is a picturesque, coastal village with a small harbour, marshes and wide, sandy beach fringed by dunes and pinewoods. Its creeks were famous during the 18th and 19th centuries for their smuggling activities with gangs of locals unloading contraband alcohol, tobacco and wool by moonlight. Today, the village is a haven for foodies with a wide range of eateries and the Drove Orchards boutique retail park. The coastline attracts walkers along the North Norfolk Coastal Path, birdwatchers, sailors, golfers and visitors enjoying the beach and many other nearby places of interest including the Burnhams, Wells-next-the-Sea and the Holkham Estate

Choseley's location is ideal for both families living in the area or visitors with the beautiful north Norfolk coast (an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty), with its excellent range of sporting and leisure facilities, just 2 miles away to the north with the larger towns of Fakenham and King's Lynn also within easy driving distance.
